MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ON THE STYLE OF PREACHERS. It is time that the advocates of the language of Shakspeare Milton, and Cowper, much gratified to find that great master of genuine English, Mr. Spurge n. litting up RELIGIOUS .- The Rev. Mr. Peeler, inventor his strong hand against the happy invasion. On his first appearance in Exeter hall, after his return from the continent, in the course of an admirable sermon, he visited it and its authors with the following thunderblas : "There is much temper here, but ih re is very much also of good common sense. I would we had another Job, to chas ise the high-sounding language of m dern the log-aliens in speech. They are men describ d by the old preachers, who say, 'Maral' and there is nothing to mark, and who shou; 'Observe!' and there is nothing to observe except the want of everything that is worth observing. We know ministers who can Carivle, who sets language on its head, Pamphlets containing the history of this Guano, and puts the last word first. These men must needs make the English language a slave to the German-the glorious, grand old Saxon must truckle to their heresies and conceal the depths of their falsehoods. I pray God the time may come when some man may unmask them, when all these bladders may be pricked; when, if teachers have anything to tell us, they may deliver themselves so that all may understand. If 50 they cannot use plain language, let their tongues go to school till they have learned $100 00 it. There is something so enticing and yet so flimsy in the modern theological school No. 4 South Wharves. that I feel constrained to warn you constantly against it. Its mystery is absurdity, and its depth is pompous ignorance .--There is no theology in it, it is a futile device to conceal the want of theological knowledge. A man, with an education that may be complete in every department except and would teach christians that all they have used are out of date, the old creeds broken up. Well, what shall we do to this wiseacre and his fellow-sages?
